Dear Hagley Members and Friends:

In this issue of the magazine, Board of Trustees President Henry B. duPont IV reflects on this past year, noting how Hagley responded to the pandemic by offering more online resources for those who were homebound. Your response was tremendous, with an increase in online visitation of 265% in 2020 compared to 2019. We will continue offering an engaging experience for those who visit us online, so please check our website for new programs and collections information.

Each year in the summer issue of Hagley Magazine we thank our donors, members, and those who have included Hagley in their estate plans. It is a joy for me to see the names of the people, institutions, and corporations who care about our mission and give generously to support us. Thank you very much for all that you do to make Hagley such a great institution. We weathered the challenges of 2020 thanks to each of you.

As I write this column, the sun is shining and the temperature hovers in the mid-60s. I can't wait to lace up at lunchtime and walk the grounds. Hagley is the perfect place to get outside this summer to exercise, to experiment at a Science Saturday, and to enjoy a Wednesday evening at Bike & Hike & Brews. Fireworks has been rescheduled for August 13 and 20 and we continue to monitor state event guidelines for safety and social distancing.

While you're visiting us this summer, please stop in the Hagley Store. Included in the fascinating array of jewelry, stationery, and gift items is an award-winning children's book that is set at Hagley. While fiction, the story is based on the real events surrounding the powder yard explosion of 1818. Author Ilona Holland worked closely with Hagley staff to capture the essence of this experience through the eyes of Eleuthera duPont, one of E. I. duPont's daughters.

For several years we have been highlighting our patent model collection. Drum roll please... this September we will celebrate the opening of the Nation of Inventors exhibition in the Hagley Visitor Center. With inspiration from our patent model collection, steampunk sculptor Bruce Rosenbaum has created a Velocipede Time Machine for the exhibition, designed to inspire the inventor in all of us. Using a mash-up of three Hagley patent models, Bruce has created a unique sculpture described as "retro-futuristic."

As we get ready to unveil the exhibition, it is with sadness that I note the passing of Alan Rothschild, the collector who amassed the Rothschild Patent Model Collection, which is now part of Hagley. Our sympathy goes to Alan's wife, family, and friends, who we hope can take some comfort in knowing Alan's wish to have the patent models on permanent display is becoming a reality.

Thank you, again, for your support. I hope to see you at Hagley this summer.

Avon History

IN THE 20 YEARS SINCE AVON PRODUCTS, INC., deposited its records at Hagley Library, they have become one of Hagley’s most popular research collections. A virtual event on May 7 will bring attention to their contribution to history.

Avon Products is one of the oldest direct selling companies in America. It traces its origins to 1886, when David H. McConnell bought the Union Publishing Company and started manufacturing perfumes to give away with his books. McConnell discovered that his customers were more interested in the fragrances than the books, so he concentrated on perfumes. The business was renamed the California Perfume Company to associate its products with the perceived beauty of the Golden State.

From the beginning, California Perfume sold directly to the consumer through a national network of sales representatives, primarily women, who were looking for economic opportunity and flexible part-time employment. In 1929, California Perfume introduced the Avon brand to modernize its image. The corporation was renamed Avon Products, Inc., in 1950. Avon rapidly expanded into the international market during the 1950s and 1960s, principally Latin America and Europe. By the early 1970s, Avon International operated in sixteen countries.

Speakers at the event take part from around the United States and Europe and discuss Avon’s activities in the United States, Brazil, and Italy, as well as its efforts to reach out to Black women and diversify its American sales force. The keynote will be offered by Katino Manko, who helped bring the Avon Collection to Hagley. Manko’s book, Ding Dong! Avon Calling! The Women and Men of Avon Products, Incorporated will be published in June.

“Avon: An International Forum on its Archive” will take place on Zoom Friday May 7, 9 a.m. to noon EDT. Registration is free but required at hagley.org/avonforum.

Summer Saturdays at Hagley

SCIENCE SATURDAYS AND SUMMER SATURDAYS ARE RETURNING with safe and engaging science demonstrations, hands-on activities, and fun all summer long! The events are outdoors, and Science Saturday activities are individually packed to-go if you would like to work on your project at home or at one of our cleaned and sanitized tables while enjoying the scenery at a safe distance from others.

The Delaware Museum of Natural History will join Hagley for four Science Saturdays while they are closed for renovations. On May 8, June 26, September 25 and October 9, they will offer their own demonstrations, hands-on activities and even some Animal Ambassadors in the fall.

The May 8 Science Saturday celebrates Longwood Gardens' Community Read with a "Seeds the Day" theme. The books for the Community Read are Ruby's Birds and The Home Place, which focus on birdwatching and birds' role in ecosystems. Participants will make bird feeders and examine adaptations that birds and seeds have that help them succeed in their environment. The day will also feature a raffle for several free family passes to Longwood Gardens, good until September.

Summer Saturdays offer a variety of fun activities for visitors including Fishing on the Brandywine. Hagley provides visitors with bamboo fishing poles and bait. Find a shady, quiet spot along the Brandywine and see what is biting. Expert guides assist with baiting hooks and releasing fish. Visit hagley.org/summer for a complete schedule.

While visiting Hagley this summer, visitors can also participate in powder yard demonstrations and activities on Workers' Hill. Bring a picnic lunch and make a full day of it on Saturdays (or any other day of the week!) at Hagley.

Fireworks Celebrates Railroading

HAGLEY'S ANNUAL FIREWORKS SHOW, presented by M&T Bank and Wilmington Trust, this year features a railroading theme. "All Aboard!" celebrates the history of railroads and their revolutionary changes in transportation and manufacturing in America.

Through music and narration, guests will take a journey through Hagley's collections, which document a significant segment of America's important railroad history through the Herbert Harwood Jr. Railroad and Transportation Collection of photos, the rich history of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and items featuring the work of industrial designer Raymond Loewy.

Hagley's intimate setting for fireworks gives visitors a unique vantage point for the display—the dramatic, colorful blasts fill the sky for viewers. There's a reason Hagley's show has been called "the best fireworks in Delaware." Visitors experience a one-of-a-kind show, accompanied by a narrated history and musical score, filled with bright colors and Hagley's signature fire paintings. For many Hagley members, the show has become a decades-long tradition to share with family and friends. Included with the pyrotechnics display is a fun-filled evening of food, music, and entertainment.

Hagley's Fireworks is a members-only event. If you haven't received your invitation by July 1, please contact Membership Manager Kim Kelleher at kkelleher@hagley.org or (302) 658-2400, ext. 235.

Patent Models Inspire Sculpture

WHEN THE NATION OF INVENTORS OPENS this September, Hagley will debut the Velocipede Time Machine, a retro-futuristic sculpture created by Bruce Rosenbaum, who calls himself a steampunk re-imagineer. Steampunk welds the tech and the aesthetics of the steam-engine era. His inspiration for this sculpture came from three nineteenth-century patent models in the museum collection: a flyball governor, an electro-magnetic motor, and a velocipede.

The sculpture will be surrounded by the three patent models and illustrations by Rosenbaum that mimic the drawings submitted to the U.S. Patent Office a century ago. "The 'patently false patent' drawings are a fun way to present steampunk re-imagined," he said. "The repurposed HuMachines, inventions, and innovations are presented with keys/descriptions to explain what the main repurposed objects were and what they were used for."

Just as nineteenth-century inventors drew inspiration from patent models at the Patent Office in Washington, D.C., modern inventors and designers look to the inventive efforts of the past when innovating for the future. His sculpture demonstrates that nineteenth-century technological innovations are still relevant to the creative minds of the twenty-first century.

Rosenbaum and his wife Melanie own ModVic Studios, a steampunk art and design company in Massachusetts. To see more about the work, visit hagley.org/velocipede.

Records of Manufacturers' Group Fully Processed

BOTTOM: ARCHIVIST ASHLEY WILLIAMS POSES BEFORE THE NAM COLLECTION.

DECADES OF RECORDS from one of the nation's most important business organizations have been fully processed, after years of work.

The National Association of Manufacturers, the largest manufacturing association in the United States, has deposited its records at Hagley since 1973. The collection is one of Hagley's most popular collections for business historians, and association staff also frequently refer to its history in developing policy positions.

In 2016, the association agreed to support the processing of collection additions, bringing the organization's history up to date and accessible. Hagley appointed Ashley Williams as project archivist that November.

The collection includes more than 2,000 digitized images available in the Hagley Digital Archives, nearly 1,100 boxes of manuscripts and a manuscripts finding aid, which inventories the content down to the folder level, running almost 1,700 pages. Williams integrated additions into material already available, updating the entire archive.

The records can be accessed via Hagley's Manuscripts Reading Room. During the pandemic, access is available by appointment only. Visit hagley.org/library-safety for details. The digital collection can be viewed anytime at digital.hagley.org.

Award-Winning Children's Book About 1818 Explosion Offers Lessons for Today

A new picture book about an 1818 explosion at Hagley could resonate with youngsters coping with the pandemic, its author believes. "The explosion was a huge event that was totally outside the control of the du Pont children but impacted them, and our children today are experiencing a huge event in terms of our pandemic," Ilona E. Holland said.

The Great Explosion: A Powder Mill Chronicle is relatable since "they know what it feels like to have something happening outside yourself, and yet there are rules that you can follow to help yourself survive." The book recently received first place for Children's Fiction from the Delaware Press Association.

A blurb on the back of the book describes the adventure as "Fire, falling timbers, and flying debris test the courage of the du Pont children as they race from their home to escape an explosion at their family's powder mill."

Her book, intended for third- through sixth-graders, is a work of fiction, told from the perspective of Eleuthera du Pont, then eleven, and her younger sister, Sophie. "It really lent itself to writing for kids," Holland said. "It had a clear beginning, middle, and an end. It was exciting. It had mishaps."

In addition to Eleuthera's account, Sophie's letters and drawings about the explosion and its aftermath are part of Hagley's rich collection that Holland drew on, with the help of Hagley Historian Lucas Clawson.

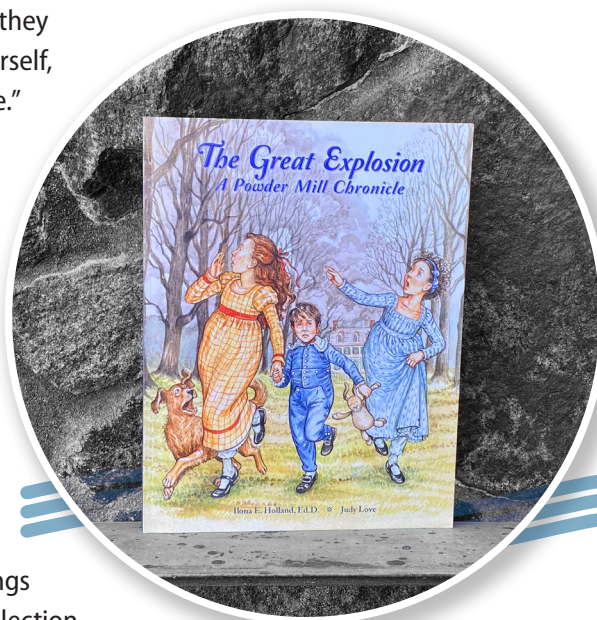

Clawson also helped explain mechanical operations of the powder mills, how black powder shaped the nation, and the intricacies of life on the Brandywine in the 1800s. That's all shared in a handy reference guide at the back of the 48-page book.

Holland is a Delaware native who visited Hagley as a child. "There's a story to be shared," she said about Hagley, particularly since she couldn't find a children's book related to Hagley during a recent visit to the Hagley Store.

So she wrote one. The Great Explosion incorporates her experience in writing other children's books and her educational background. She has a doctorate in education and taught at the Harvard Graduate School of Education and evaluated educational material for children. While in Cambridge, she advised and evaluated many educational programs for WGBH-TV.

"Everyone at Hagley embraced the idea and supported the project," she said.

It is also generating strong support by readers. "My 7-year-old daughter and I loved reading this book together," Shannon Canton German wrote on Amazon. "The historically accurate story was told in a way that my daughter could understand and was captivated by."

EACH SPRING WHEN I AM ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE THIS LETTER for Hagley's Annual Report, it is always with a sense of pride for what we have accomplished over the course of the past year. The year 2020 presented the world and Hagley with challenges unlike any we have ever seen in the past. I could not be more proud to say that Hagley has weathered 2020 with great success and we are looking forward to the future now, more than ever before. You may recall that at this time last year, Hagley underwent a change in leadership with the appointment of Jill MacKenzie as Executive Director. Jill has done a tremendous job in her new position, leading Hagley through 2020 while focusing on a new strategic vision and plan for Hagley that will carry us forward for years to come. I would like to acknowledge the countless contributions of Hagley's previous Executive Director, Dr. David A. Cole. David's foresight and knowledge helped to lay the groundwork for where we are today.

In addition to the public health situation caused by COVID-19 in 2020, Hagley quite literally weathered another storm in 2020 when on August 7 an EF1 tornado along with destructive 95-mile-per-hour winds, caused extensive damage along a path starting in Yorklyn, Delaware, near my home, going through Greenville, and ending near Hagley. Hagley lost close to 150 trees, including three state champion specimens. Sadly, one of those felled was the former co-national champion Osage-orange tree that stood near the Hagley Barn. We hope to salvage a portion of the root system to propagate a new tree, as well as use wood from the tree to build benches and honor this former champion. In addition, we lost a sugar maple that stood behind the First Office and a shingle oak in the fireworks field. Thankfully, our team of dedicated staff rushed to the site to assess the damage and begin the clean-up effort.

Once again, our Library experienced another successful and productive year. While we were not able to serve researchers on site, that did not stop the efforts of our staff to obtain new collections and continue the processing of other important collections already in our stacks. I mentioned in my last report that Hagley had obtained the records of Cinecraft, which is perhaps the world's largest intact archive of an industrial film production company. In addition, the Library team completed a large multi-year project that added nearly fifty years of records to the collection of the National Association of Manufacturers. On the topic of collection development, Hagley is now the proud repository for the prominent Madison Avenue advertising agency of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn (BBDO) as well as the Industrial Designers Society of America, to name a few of the highlights.

The Library staff also undertook a long-term commitment to make the experiences of women and minorities described in our collections more easily accessible through processing and critical cataloging. For example, the Library dedicated a significant amount of time to processing the records of Catalyst, Inc., an organization committed to the advancement of women in the workplace, and launched an oral history initiative documenting African American STEM pioneers and their work in Delaware. The first participant in this important initiative was Dr. Wesley Memeger Jr., who played key roles in the development of Kevlar and Nomex. Dr. Memeger was interviewed at the end of 2020 and since then, his interview has been turned into a documentary which is featured on the Hagley website.

Our efforts to restore the historic core of the Hagley property continued throughout last year and will continue for many years to come. Restoration of Hagley's iconic Birkenhead Mill took place over the past year and was recently completed. The new water wheel, constructed primarily of white oak, weighs more than 13,000 pounds, and is supported by a new main shaft. In addition to the Birkenhead, restoration work continued for Mill Buildings #15 and #16 as well as in the mill race. I hope you and your family will visit Hagley this year to see the results of our work! In addition to the above, our talented staff continued work on Hagley's new Discovery Loft space in the visitor center as well as the Nation of Inventors Gallery. Both spaces are scheduled to open later in 2021. We look forward to welcoming our members to view this exciting new exhibition this fall with an opening celebration!

The pandemic surely presented its fair share of challenges this year to our typically scheduled programming. However difficult and challenging, I am pleased to report that through the ingenuity of the Hagley staff, we were able (at the onset of the pandemic) to pivot to online programming through a new platform called "Hagley from Home." The "Hagley from Home" page includes content for audiences of all ages ranging from talks by the Hagley Historian, Fields Trips from Home, Hagley Up Close, Science Saturdays from Home, and What's Blooming at Hagley. We look forward to growing this online resource in the coming months! Thankfully, later in the year, we were able to continue with limited programming and events to engage with our audiences such as Bike, Hike, & Brews, Craft Fair, and our Gingerbread House Competition honoring our local hometown heroes.

In conclusion, I would like to thank all of you who continue to contribute to Hagley in countless ways throughout the year. Our donors, staff, volunteers, and members allow us to continue to offer our educational programs and preserve our property for the future. We have experienced, and are continuing to experience unprecedented times and I want to thank you for making 2020 a success for Hagley.

Again, thank you for your support in making Hagley a treasure of the Brandywine Valley and a must-see institution for visitors from around the world.
